

Top Ten Tips
Setting a Good Example
as a Believer in the Workplace

1. To be able to set an example you need to operate from a strong value base. Take some time to decide what your values are going to be or to consolidate the values you already have.

What values do you admire the most? _____

2. Think about people who have been an example to you and consider why they have stood out for you.

Name some people you know who use their own values in the workplace? _____

3. Arrange a meeting with those you admire to explore how they use their values in the workplace, engage values in challenging situations and who their examples are.

Name: _____ Date & time _____

Name: _____ Date & time _____

Name: _____ Date & time _____

4. Reminding yourself of your own uniqueness, think about the values you would like to operate from?

List the values you will claim for your own. _____

5. It is important to make these value an integral part of your attitudes, behaviour and manners.

How do you think you can make these values part of your mode of operation? _____

6. Take a trip down memory lane and remember a time when someone has remarked on your values or behaviour in a positive way. Make a note of this below.

7. The hardest times to keep to your values are when they are tested. Sometimes your values are tested in certain circumstances or by certain people.

What can you do to ensure that you stay true throughout any of life or work's challenges?

8. Where do these values sit within your faith as a Believer in Jesus?

9. What example has Jesus set for you that you'd like to use in your life.

10. What example would you like others to remember about you?

Contact Ladey for a free consultation.